CARE OF DISK DRIVES SUBJECT OF NOVEMBER 8 MEETING

Charles Gilliland, an Apple and IBM certified technician for over 10 years, spoke to us about the proper care of disk drives.

Two things are important; (1) use quality disks, and (2) keep the drives clean and free of foreign objects. Care should be taken with disks so that something is not picked up on the bottom of the disk and then placed in the drive.

While he is generally not in favor of head cleaning kits for the 5-1/4" drives, they are probably the best alternative for persons who are not comfortable going into their drives. A head cleaning kit is recommended, however, for 3.5" drives because they are harder to get into and because they are very delicate.

Drives should be cleaned according to their usage. The ordinary individual needs to clean his drives about once a year, while schools and businesses should clean theirs every 3 to 4 months.

(Go to Page 2)

If you are going to clean your heads, don't use a spray cleaner and don't use a cleaner with a lubricant. The best and cheapest cleaner is medical grade alcohol. The head is on the bottom of the drive, and the head load pad on the top is usually made of felt. Cleaning liquid should not get on this felt pad. After using a liquid cleaner, leave the drive door open for a while and don't put a disk in until the drive has had a chance to dry.

One other thing he covered was timing. He said that ProDos will tell you if the drive is too fast or slow.

Should you leave the drive doors open or closed when not in use? Don't leave them closed for extended periods of time because the head pad deforms and may not read properly. In most cases, leave them open.

Don't transport a 3.5" drive without the original shipping card or a diskette in it. Moving 5-1/4" drives is not as critical.

Charles said he would come back at a later date to give a hands-on session on cleaning drives. We will be looking forward to it, Charles!
